

Dolphins are air-breathing mammals found in coastal waters around the world. Dolphins locate fish by echolocation, the bouncing of sound waves off of their prey to find it. Each dolphin has a unique whistle which identifies it to other dolphins in their pod (family group).